SUCCESSFUL SHOW GIVEN FOR LITTLE THEATER

If the entertainment provided by the Little Theater committee of the Arts and Crafts last Friday and Saturday nights is to be judged by the standards which should be set for the criticism of local amateur plays, we should say that it had much merit.

Mr. Bentinck, the producer, had, as all producers of plays staged in Carmel always have had, many things to contend with. The size and awkwardness of the present stage, the lack of suitable scenery and properties, the training of much raw material and the necessity of trying out untried plays are all serious handicaps to successful production, but the work was earnest and sincere and as such should receive just commendation.

A one-act tragedy, "Crazy Anne," was the first number on the program. It was written by Jeanne D'Orge, a local playwright, and had much grim realism both in action and stage setting. There were some beautiful light effects and stage pictures which will not be soon forgotten by those who witnessed it.

Several pupils of the Swett-Perry dancing school helped to furnish the evening's entertainment, and they all gave evidence of the fine technical training which they receive at the hands of these young women. Christine and Virginia Burton might be especially mentioned for the quaint little dance they staged on Friday night. It was given with much expression and received spontaneous appreciation from the audience.

The performance was closed with a comedy, "Sold," written and produced by Richard Bentinck. It was a clever satire on "Art," but was all mixed up with pants, naked souls and real estate promoters. It was uproariously funny and sent everyone home laughing. The cast was well balanced and full of "pep." They all deserve a share in the general and hearty shower of approval bestowed on their united effort to further perfection in local dramatic art.

Mr. Bentinck is an actor with a future and will doubtless take no small part in the development of the dramatic spirit of the community. His voice is well modulated, he exhibits skill and feeling, and has what is so unusual in either amateur or professional, the fine art of repression. However, Mr. Bentinck can hardly be placed in the amateur class, as he has had training under David Belasco.

These plays, which are designed to forward the Little Theater movement in this village, should be given the most kindly criticism and the greatest possible amount of encouragement, for it is only by constant try outs of locally-written plays that the creative ability in this art, which is so necessary to our community if we hold to our traditions, can be stimulated and fostered.

Doughboy Statue on View

The statue for the San Rafael Soldier Memorial, which J. J. Mora is finishing, will be set up in plaster next week, and those who care to see the work before shipment, will be welcome at the studio, on the Carmel Mission grounds, next Tuesday, between 2 and 5.

OPPONENTS TO BONDING AGREE NOT TO BEFOG THE ISSUE

Editor Pine Cone:

RIGHT you are. Let's not befog the issue—the borrowing of $20,000, at 6 per cent, on twenty-year bonds, $14,000 of which will go into a city hall, $6,000 into fire protective apparatus—but the consideration of the issue in its relation to other city needs, is certainly not "befogging" it. It is the only way to clearly consider it. If, as you say, the time is not ripe for installing a sewer system, how much less ripe is it for building a city hall! If sewers are an impossibility without water to flush them, how much more impossible is a fire pump without water to feed it!

The project is that we save $360 annual rental by building a city hall, on which the interest to be paid amounts to $840 a year. Now, rent is no worse a dead horse than interest, and in this instance, the interest would be paid out of town. The rent is spent here. Adding the interest paid to the cost of the building as estimated, and the total comes to $24,400—and we only get a $16,000 building for our money. As a straight business proposition we certainly wouldn't build a city hall until the rentals for housing our officials amounted to at least $840 a year—would we? Surely not. Then what reasons are there for doing so? Patriotism? Civic pride? Better quarters for our town officials?

All good reasons, if true. But isn't it a better showing of patriotism to accept the minor inconveniences of the present accommodations until such time as sound business judgment approves the real need? Civic pride? Is ours the kind that needs a gaudy front, covering and concealing a heavy mortgage? And are the accommodations so much worse than those of most of our business men and merchants, that we need feel shame for them? And, honestly, isn't a low tax-rate a better sign of patriotism, civic pride, city endeavor, and a greater incentive to home-making, home-buying, than an unpaid-for town hall?

As to the $6,000 for fire protection. I have objections to the plan as outlined, believe it too expensive and inadequate; but until I can lay out a substitute plan, let my hint of lack of water, lack of water-mains, suffice. But even if the submitted plan, on which the bond issue is based, and for which the money must be spent if the bonds are voted—if that plan were indisputably the best scheme for this town, a bond issue is not the way to buy it. If nakedness is the alternative, the dollar-a-week plan of buying a suit of clothes is allowable—paying for it while you wear it out, still paying after it is worn out and thrown in the rag-bag. But paying interest for twenty years on bonds that have purchased so ephemeral affair as a chemical and booster-pump combination, is not allowable. In fact, it is absurd. Nor is there any need of it. Our city attorney can show you a better way to buy fire protection needs, without bonds, and all paid for at once.

No, we don't need bonds for fire fighting; and we shouldn't think of bonds yet for a city hall; so there's really nothing to complicate the selection of four good men or women to be trustees when we get to the polls in April. That is important for Carmel's good, is of moment to every resident. And you can't vote unless you're registered. Registration closes March 10. Get on the register, then make your selection from the candidates without once considering them in connection with this bond issue. Pick the best men—or women—regardless of their preferences on the bond matter.

NATIONAL LEAGUE OF PEN WOMEN TO ESTABLISH BRANCH SOCIETY IN CARMEL

Word has been received by De Neale Morgan that an organization of the local branch of the National League of American Pen Women is shortly to be effected. This organization is formed for the purpose of continuing and perpetuating the work of professional women of America, and for promoting same; to secure and encourage by co-operation production in every department of effort.

The headquarters of the National organization is at Washington, D. C. Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, formerly Margaret Sidney, author of the "Five Little Peppers" stories, is the vice-president at large for the Western Regional district. Any woman is eligible for active membership who has published original matter and who is a paid worker, or who has been a paid worker, as a poet, author, journalist, editor, publisher, genealogist, dramatic writer, publicity professional, advertising expert, painter, sculptor, illustrator, illuminator, designer, cartoonist, composer, song or lyric writer, or lecturer of professional rank.

It is planned that De Neale Morgan of Carmel shall be the organizer and president of the local branch, which can be formed with a membership of five.

THREE IRISH PLAYS WILL BE GIVEN ON MARCH 17th

The Carmel Repertory Players will present three plays of Ireland at Manzanita Theater on St. Patrick's Day:

A serious one act drama by J. M. Synge (In the Shadow of the Glen) to be staged by Edward G. Kuster.

A short comedy by Lady Gregory (The Workhouse Ward) to be staged by Hobart Glassell.

An allegory on Irish liberty by W. B. Yeates (Cathleen ni Houlihan) to be staged by Herbert Heron.

The plays are totally different in theme, style and characterization, and so offer opportunity for greatly varied treatment; but all have the indescribable charm of the Celtic temperament, and each deals with a phase of individual or national freedom—that dearest of all things to the Irish—and so the complete bill is an admirable offering for the old holiday of Saint Patrick.

The Carmel Repertory Players had their origin two years ago in plans for a small company to make occasional productions in Carmel and carry the most successful on brief tours.

The profits of the first local performances will go to the purchase of curtains, costumes and lights. The profits of the tours will be divided among the company.

The equipment purchased will be at the disposal of the Arts and Crafts Little Theater, in which the various workers in the Repertory Players are deeply interested.

The organization announces a production of Ibsen's Ghosts in about two months.

BETTER BE SAFE THAN SORRY

An impression appears to prevail that a married man with a family does not have to make out a Federal Income Tax Return unless he earns more income than his family exemptions allow.

For the guidance of taxpayers we would point out that, if a married man has earned $2000 (about $165 per month) he MUST make a return even if he does not have to pay tax on account of having a family. A single man must make a return if he earned $1000 (about $85 per month.)

Every employer is compelled to send a statement to the Government giving the name of every employee (mechanic or otherwise) who earned $1000 or over for 1921. This gives the Federal authorities the name of everyone who should have made a return.

Every individual, who had a gross income of $5000 or over, must make a return, no matter what his net income was.

All partnerships (without any exception whatever) must make a return. This also applies to corporations.

The penalty for failure to make a return is up to $1000.

Mrs. Mary Miller entertained recently at her home out on the Point, her son George Miller of Richmond and his family. Father Porter of St. Paul's Church near Richmond, was one of the party. He visited Father Mestres and assistant of San Carlos Mission, Monterey. While here he made the remark that "Carmel is the next place to Heaven."

We Did It Twice

San Francisco, Calif., Feb. 24

Editor Pine Cone,
Carmel-by-the-Sea.

I would like to correct a statement which has twice been published in the Pine Cone.

Although I am not now a member of the Arts and Crafts Club, I was one of its charter members. Am also one of its stockholders. Naturally am interested in everything the Pine Cone has to say of it.

When the passing of Mrs. Josephine Foster was published, the statement was made that she had organized the Club of Arts and Crafts. In this week's Pine Cone the same statement is again made in "Vagant Impressions of the Pine Nut."

Now I am sure that if Mrs. Foster had heard such a statement she would have corrected it.

As our first meetings were held in my own little cottage in Carmel, I feel that I am in the position of one who should correct it in justice to Miss Elise Allen—the lady who did organize the Carmel Club of Arts and Crafts.

Miss Elise Allen was also the first president of the club. I think Mr. Louis Slevin was elected secretary and treasurer. However, all such information one should be able to get from Mrs. Hand, who was secretary when Mrs. Foster was president. In case those records have been lost and forgotten, let me give a few names of those who were present:

Miss M. L. Morgan, who had charge of Pine Inn that very first season that Mr. F. H. Powers and Mr. J. F. Devendorf opened the place; Mrs. Frank Powers, Mrs. M. E. Slevin, her son, Louis Slevin, Mrs. George F. Buck, Mrs. Webster, Mrs. J. F. Short (now Mrs. Jackson), Miss Alys Miller, and myself.

There were others, but I cannot recall them now. I do know, however, that Mrs. Foster was not among them, nor were Mrs. Hand and Mrs. Yard.

I can well understand how such an impression could get out, for Mrs. Foster certainly did have the necessary "go"—"pep" we call it now—to make it a success. And her very able co-workers, Mrs. Hand and Mrs. Yard, helped mightily in the good work.

Of course there were others, but you all know them.

Trusting you will make this correction public, I am sincerely yours,
Agnes L. Miller.

P. S.—Am interested in your bond issue, and hope and trust it will go through.

Taxpayers Didn't Lose

Salinas, Calif., Feb. 18, 1922

Editor Pine Cone,
Carmel-by-the-Sea.

I note in the Pine Cone where you took a shot at my friend, Jim Taylor. On account of Mr. Taylor's many acts of kindness to me personally, I feel it my duty to write to you in reference to that unfortunate affair, which compelled Mr. Taylor to dig up $10,000 out of his own pocket.

At the December meeting of the Board of Supervisors, Mr. Taylor's accounts were checked up and O. K.'d, and just prior to the January meeting Mr. Taylor informed me he could not make his accounts balance by $10,000. My office immediately started to verify his accounts and our investigation showed that his cash was $10,000 short. At the January meeting of the Board of Supervisors Mr. Taylor deposited $10,000 of his personal money in the Treasury and officially at no time has Mr. Taylor been short. The records will verify this statement.

If Mr. Taylor had been short in his accounts the District Attorney would have been compelled to bring action against the loudmen at once.

Very truly yours,
A. G. Winckler

Another Pine Cone "Fan"

Feb. 14, 1922.

Dear Mr. Bill Overstreet:

As a valentine I'm sending you, with pleasure (and hopes of it being cashable) a check for $2 for fifty-two more issues of the New York Times—of Carmel, the new plethoric and meaty little sheet which I always read the minute it hits the joint, dropping anything else that may be in my hand at the moment.

I have only one suggestion to make. How could the most capacious offer anything further? Pave it or let'er lay as you please, but DON'T take up any more valuable space discussing Ocean Avenue that might better be devoted to description of the morals and manners of Carmel's stray cats. Hoping to get a peek into the printing shop soon, but rather doubting it, sincerely and cordially,
THEODORE S. SOLOMONS.

Down at old Carmel,
Smiles are sweetest,
Time is fleetest,

Days are brightest,
Down at my Carmel.

Of beautiful Carmel.

HILLS NAMED FOR U. C. SAVANTS

Dr. A. C. Lawson and the late Joseph Laconte will be the names of certain landmarks to which Berkeley will look upward in the future, according to a movement initiated by the Contra Costa Hills Club for the object of naming various eminences in the Berkeley Hills after savants of the University. Other points will be named in honor of Professors Wickson, Hilgard, Moses and Merriam.

TALE OF A CITY

"No town that never owed anything ever owned anything," and never amounted to much. This trite saying is true of many of the fifth and sixth class cities of California. Examples innumerable could be cited of small towns which struggled along year after year with inadequate municipal facilities and never prospered nor attracted outside attention until they went into bonded debt.

We have a striking example in our own county. King City, on the main line of the railroad, was an unattractive, untidy and uninteresting cattle town for years—no streets, no sewers, no fire department, no city hall was in evidence.

The citizens got together, issued bonds and made a model interior city.

Carmel can do the same. We are away behind in many municipal utilities.

The proposition to issue fire apparatus and city hall bonds should receive the support of every Carmel voter.

Then watch us go!

THE ACQUISITIVE INSTINCT

The squirrel gathers nuts in the summer and hides them, not because they are endowed with a superhuman foresight into the perils of the next winter but because they have an instinct for gathering things.

The honey-bee, sucking the flowers and storing the product, has no knowledge of cold weather ahead of him, but Divine Plan has put into his heart the instinct for hoarding the things he likes to eat.

The enthusiasm with which youngsters make collections of dried butterflies or postage stamps is the expression of an instinct for gathering things for his enjoyment.

This acquisitive instinct is a most complete and sufficient answer to those who preach communism and the abolition of private property.

Forbid a man to own things for his personal, private and exclusive use and you deprive him of his greatest incentive to industry and economy. You make him a waster, and remove him from the higher circle of animals to a place among the jackals and rabbits.

Numerous announcements by "Billy" Nesbitt that he intended to retire from office this year had prepared the voters to seek a new candidate for sheriff. Seek no further. The friends of Nesbitt have decided to again decorate him with the badge of shrievalty.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson is no self-seeker. But should he wage a winning fight against the Yap-Jap and Hughes-Balfour agreements he will have added the necessary tabasco to the presidential medicine he's been brewing since the last convention.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

Booth Tarkington's longish short story, "Harlequin and Columbine", written some ten years ago, is one of the most delicious yarns about temperament—in that case a stars temperament—that has ever been written. There isn't much plot, but plot is entirely superfluous when there are so many delightfully drawn characters as this story contains. Talbot Potter, whose well known expression as he majestically parades down Fifth avenue, "lifted him above the crowd to such a high serenity his face might have been that of a young Pope borne along in his chair". He pauses a moment before the public library "with its two annoyed pet lions, typifying learning," and then passes on to the theater for the rehearsal of his new play. That rehearsal is an extraordinary amusing affair—but not to young Canby, the harassed author, nor to Packer, the pathetically obsequious stage manager; nor to the cast. The only person not visibly affected is old Tinker, the star's manager, who had the "definite appearance of having long ago learned that after a little while life will beat anybody's game, no matter how good." Then there is Wanda Malone, who innocently enough nearly wrecks the whole show. Mr. Tarkington's satire is keen, but not bitter. He knows how to make us laugh at his Talbot Potters without allowing us to lose our respect for them. They are ridiculous, but not so ridiculous as to be caricatures.

"The libraries are stocked with books about Lincoln, written by historians, poets, statesmen, relatives, and political associates. Why cumber the shelf with another sketch?" asks Russell H. Conwell in the foreword to his book, "Why Lincoln Laughed." Then Mr. Conwell, replying to his own question, says: "The answer to that reasonable question is in the expressed hope that great thinkers and sincere humanitarians may not give up the task of attempting to set before the people the true Lincoln. One turns away from every volume, saying, 'I am not yet acquainted with that great man.' In his book, Doctor Conwell tells why Abraham Lincoln's laugh vibrated so far, and why his humor was so inimitable, repeating many of the ex-President's favorite jokes, and dwelling upon his admiration for Artemus Ward.

Cornelia Stratton Parker, author of "An American Idyll," went out and worked with the working woman—in the cold packing room of a candy factory; in a noisy, foul-smelling brass foundry; in a damp steam laundry; in a small, stuffy stock room of a dress factory; in the finishing room of a bleachery; in the pantry of a large hotel. Her experiences, related recently in a series of articles in "Harper's Magazine," aroused a great deal of comment from readers, workers, and proprietors. These articles, written simply to present a dramatic picture of things as they are, and not to condemn employer or employee, will be issued in book form next month under the title of "Working With the Working Woman."

So many other qualities to make a novel passably good are required if the scene is laid in some of the islands of the East, if the author has first-hand knowledge of the places of which he writes and if he makes a good use of the mystery, the insidious forces, and the subtle influences, which we are told, play such important parts in the lives of the men from the North. Louis Couperus' novel of Java has these qualities in addition to a plot well thickened with intrigue, and yet it is not an engrossing story. It gives an excellent picture of the life of Dutch officials in remote stations and much of the picture is unpleasant. It is the story of Van Oudijk, the Resident of Labuwangi, his wife, Leonie, who is very completely described—"Hers was a silent, correct depravity, both physical and moral."—of Doddie, his daughter, and of Theo, his son, who has an affair with his step-mother. Things look bad for Van Oudijk, from the first and they get sadder and worse until the final blowup.

Berton Braley's "The Sheriff of Silver Bow," is a thriller, extremely well worked out of thrillers. The scene is Butte, Mont., not only the visible Butte, but the invisible (from above ground) which lives and moves and carries on crime and intrigue apparently in the deserted mines which have burrowed in and out under the city. There are really two heroes, the sheriff of Silver Bow himself, and an amateur detective and newspaperman, besides a whole flock of very satisfactory villains, running all the way from the State and county attorneys down to one Dokey Benny and his squad of thugs. As we have said, it is all very well worked out, and answers all the requirements of a detective and adventure story, besides being entertainingly written.

PROPOSED PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR SUMMER TRAINING

The military training camps of the coming summer are planned to embrace, for the first time, all of the components and agencies of the Army of the United States as contemplated under the National Defense Act.

Contingent upon congressional appropriations, war department plans provide that approximately 160,000 National Guardsmen, 30,000 Reserve Officers, 10,000 student R. O. T. C. and 27,000 civilians will undertake field training.

Among the places designated for training purposes are the Presidio at Monterey, the Presidio at San Francisco, and Camp Lewis, Wash.

Ince Feature Drama

Explodes False Doctrine

"Men and their sons first!" This false doctrine of a bygone day is exploded by a high minded, sensitive, self sacrificing woman in a series of tense, dramatic situations in Thomas H. Ince's super production, "Hail the Woman," which is showing at the Strand Theater, Monterey, today and tomorrow.

Florence Vidor, who takes the role of the "triumphant woman," gives a deep interpretation of those qualities of womanhood that direct the fate of humanity throughout the aeons. She is supported by a brilliant cast, including Midge Bellamy, Theodore Roberts, Gertrude Claire, Mathilde Brundage, Lloyd Hughes, Charles Meredith, Tully Marshall, Edward Martindel, and others.

Prominent Week-Enders

Visit Local Savant

Mrs. B. L. Taylor and a friend, Mrs. C. S. Stanton, visited Carmel last week end. They registered at Pine Inn.

Mrs. Taylor is the widow of the late B. L. Taylor, who for many years was identified with the Chicago Tribune, and the originator of "A Line o' Type or Two" by B. L. T. Taylor was also a short story writer of note. Mrs. Taylor is out from the east, but has been for a time in Pasadena. The ladies left here on Sunday, but will return shortly to take up scientific study with Grant Wallace.

Cooks off European Saunter

Mrs. M. Cook and her daughter, Miss E. Phyllis Cook, are leaving Carmel today for a visit in San Francisco, preliminary to an extended trip abroad. On their return they plan to make Carmel their home and build. Miss Cook has a brother in Munich, and she and her mother intend to make that their objective in their European trip, stopping on the way in Paris and London and other points of interest. Those who attended the Dickens evening recently will remember "Shades of Night" and Miss Cook in her very intelligent impersonation of the modern young woman who was being haunted by the ghosts of her ancestors.

Actors' Own Theater

The players of New York, in celebration of the birthday of "the great Emancipator," more or less "emancipated" themselves by inaugurating a theater in which they are sole directors, managers, actors, owners, et al. The Players' Assembly began in New York what may prove to be the most important engagement of the season. Banded together with their own stage director, their own artists, players and executive assistants, they made presentation of a sensational play from Paris, "Montmartre," and acting most of the roles themselves, made a most auspicious beginning.

The city of Washington, D. C. will be presented with a bust of Enrico Caruso which is the work of Joseph Anthony Atchison, a sculptor of the capital, the presentation to be made by the Caruso Memorial Committee.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE
XVIII.—LOUISIANA

THE discovery of Louisiana dates back to the beginning of the sixteenth century, when the Spanish explorers, Alvarez de Pineda and De Soto sailed up the Mississippi. In 1682 La Salle descended the Mississippi and took possession of the entire valley in the name of the French king, Louis XIV. In his honor this region was named Louisiana. French colonies soon sprang up, including New Orleans, which was founded in 1718.

An interesting chapter of Louisiana was the formation of the Company of the West by a financial schemer named John Law. This company ostensibly was to exploit the new colony and held out to speculators an alluring get-rich-quick scheme.

In 1763 France ceded Louisiana east of the Mississippi to England, and, by secret treaty, New Orleans and the western territory went to Spain. Spanish rule proved unendurable to the inhabitants and the restrictions over the navigation of the Mississippi led to hostilities between the northern American settlements and Spain. This situation, however, was brought to a peaceful termination by Spain relinquishing her rights to this territory to France and the purchase in 1803 by the United States from France of the entire Louisiana territory.

The southern portion of this acquisition was organized as the territory of Orleans and in 1812 was admitted as the eighteenth state of the Union, with an area of 48,500 square miles. As the Louisiana coat-of-arms has a pelican in its center, the state is often called the Pelican State. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

TWO IDEAS OF CIVIL LIBERTY

Difference Between Governments of Greece and Rome and Those of the Gothic Tribes.

There was this radical difference between the governments of Greece and Rome and those of the Gothic tribes. In the former the state was everything, the individual nothing; the state was thought to have a perfect right to the property, liberty, and even life of its citizens. In the latter the individual was everything and the state comparatively nothing; all rights were thought to exist, to inhere by nature in the individual; and the state could demand nothing from him for public use without giving him an equivalent. Here we find the fundamental principle of civil liberty; that principle which has been so carefully guarded in the English and in all the Anglo-American constitutions, and which was so happily and tersely expressed by Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence. Our rude Saxon ancestors, though under a kingly government, had more real liberty, and a more just appreciation of the true dignity of man, than had the polished citizens of the republics of the Mediterranean. The legislative authority was vested in the witenage-mote, or assembly of wise men.—Dexter A. Hawkins.

Remorseful Ghost.

A pathetic story is told of the ghost of Bisham abbey. It is said that the wife of Sir Thomas Hobby was unnaturally severe with her son, who it seems, had a peculiar aversion to writing, and in his obstinacy would wilfully blot his copybooks. One day his mother, enraged at his perverseness, lost her self-control and beat the poor boy so unmercifully that he died from his injuries. Since then one of the bedrooms in the abbey has been haunted by the specter of the cruel woman, who glides through the chamber in the act of washing the bloodstains from her hands.

It is stated that some years ago, when an old window shutter of the sixteenth century was removed, "a packet of antique copybooks of that period was discovered pushed into the wall between the joists of the skirting, and several of these books, on which young Hobby's name was written, were covered with blots."

Don't be known as an easy mark. It is better to take advantage of an opportunity than to be one.

Hoax—"I hate to play poker with Bjones. He's so quarrelsome." Joax—"Apt to raise the deuce, eh?" Hoax—"He'll raise a pair of deuces."

Vagrant Impressions of the Pine Nut

Was It a Vagrant
Zephyr or Far-Sighted
Merchant Who
Removed the Sign?

O H, joy, oh, rapture! One of those signs between here and Monterey is down, and it is the biggest and ugliest of the lot. Now, some gloomy-browed pessimist will say that it was the wind that did it. 'Twere sweeter to think some nice merchant wants to sweeten life's cup for an aesthetic public and, maybe, incidentally brighten with a few extra shekels the discouraging left side of the cash book. If I want to live in a fool's paradise, for heaven's sake let me do it. There are always so many people who insist on telling you unpleasant truths. The next time I take my Rolls-Royce over the hill I'm going to get out and peep under that sign to see whose it is, and then I'm going to take that dollar that was put away the other day for emergencies and spend it all at once—recklessly, gloriously—in that man's store. Let him charge 20 per cent for freight. He can deliver one egg for it if he wants to. It'll possibly be taking a long chance between him and the wind, but if he wants to shine by reflected glory, it makes no "never-minds."

Last time I tried to Pine-Nut my way to your affections, I didn't succeed. I tackled the wrong thing. Politics is too big a problem for the female of the species. I'm sure that at least one of the Trustees was peeved at that article I wrote about them, for when I met him in "Bahama" one day, he didn't say, "What shall it be?" Anyway, it's time to get back to safe subjects, and I don't know anything safer than to tackle somebody that isn't here and can't protect himself.

Everyone around here knows Xavier Martinez, the artist. He numbers many people in Carmel among his most intimate friends. He is a sweet lovable soul and we all have a very tender spot in our hearts for "Marty." He has never been a resident of Carmel, but has been here often and he and his work are known well by the writers and artists around here.

Marty is a temperamental genius. At a studio gathering he can sing and act scenes from "Il Trovatore" so convincingly that one might find it difficult to believe that it was not Caruso who was performing. He is earnest, sincere, big-souled. He tackles either work or play with absolute abandon and singleness of purpose, and when they selected him for a part in "The Toad", his one idea was that it was up to him to do credit to the performance.

Marty and his wife were spending some time that summer in Carmel. They were great friends of the Newberrys.

Everyone of the old-timers will remember "The Toad," not only on account of its spectacular dramatic success, but because of the sheer beauty of the lines. Mrs. Newberry was the author and Garnet Holme, the producer, with Mr. Newberry playing the star part. Martinez, on account of his low, beetling brow was chosen to be one of the assassins. Perry and Garnet thought they had a "find."

The rehearsals progressed. Marty found some difficulty in memorizing his lines, which consisted of, "I pierced him with my knife." He secured a good substantial shingle and spent much time on carving it out into the most murderous looking knife that ever pierced a well-beloved King. The day of the first performance arrived, and Marty had not yet become letter-perfect in his part. Perry went around all day building properties and doing stage carpentering and time after time would he patiently call out Marty's cue, and Marty with equal patience and perseverance would solemnly respond: "I pierced him with my knife."

When Martinez was finally made up and dressed for the performance, he was the most beautiful assassin that ever trod the boards. He had a red fez of some kind over his head, it was knotted in the back and his gleaming black eyes and moustache and swarthy skin looked murderous enough even for Garnet Holme. The curtain was rung up and the play progressed through its successive dramatic stages. Finally, Grant Wallace, as the King, had been put out of the way, and the villain, John Gribner, was about to be foiled. The moment was tense. The four assassins crept stealthily up out of the palms. It was time for the criminal to hiss forth his confession. Marty gulped, hesitated, then gulped again. It was a bad case of stage fright. (We all know how it is). The other three assassins stood petrified, waiting, waiting. Then, gallantly to the rescue came three voices instead of one: "I pierced him with my knife." The situation was saved, but poor Grant. He had been well killed. He had suffered from three knife-thrusts—two more than Bertha had planned for him.

Marty's humiliation was pitiful to behold. The next morning he sat in the Newberry patio and rolled his dally supply of cigarettes. "Bertha," said he, (Roll, roll!) "Eet ees awful! I must not spoil your beautiful play tonight. (Roll, roll!) My part ees verry important. Much depends on my lines. (Roll, roll!) I shall be letter-perfect. I pierced heem weeth my knife! I pierced heem weeth my knife! I pierced heem weeth my knife!" and Bertha went on about her work to the muttered refrain of "I pierced heem weeth my knife!"

All day long again Marty rallied to the cause. Whenever any of the cast met him, they would give him the cue and with a wild light in his eyes, he would ring out triumphantly, "I pierced heem weeth my knife!"

Let us pass lightly over the hours leading up to the crucial moment. There are some things in life fraught with too much tensely to be lightly dwelt upon. Perry, in his anxiety to have Marty receive his full meed of praise from the audience for his dramatic skill, had cautioned the other assassins to keep quiet, and not hog Marty's part away from him. They looked grim and forbidding as they bulked formidably on the Palace Steps. The cue came distinctly. The whole cast was in the wings waiting expectantly for Marty's dramatic moment. He stood beetling his brows, true to form, but speechless. Perry sent out the cue once more in a sibilant whisper. The First Assassin shook himself, then his gleaming eye lighted on his knife, he thought of the shingle from which it had sprung and he gasped:

"OH G-A-W-D!!! I KEELED HIM WEETH MY STEECK!!!"
Curtain.

Ordinance No. 44

AN ORDINANCE CALLING AND PROVIDING FOR, AND GIVING NOTICE OF, A SPECIAL ELECTION TO BE HELD IN THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, CALIFORNIA, ON MONDAY, THE 10TH DAY OF APRIL, A. D., 1922, IN CONSOLIDATION WITH THE GENERAL MUNICIPAL ELECTION TO BE HELD IN AND FOR SAID CITY ON SAID DATE, SAID SPECIAL ELECTION BEING FOR THE PURPOSE OF SUBMITTING TO THE QUALIFIED VOTERS OF SAID CITY PROPOSITIONS TO INCUR A BONDED DEBT BY SAID CITY FOR THE ACQUISITION, CONSTRUCTION, FURNISHING AND EQUIPMENT OF A CITY HALL IN AND FOR SAID CITY, AND THE ACQUISITION AND CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN FIRE-FIGHTING APPARATUS AND A FIRE ALARM SYSTEM FOR SAID CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA.

WHEREAS, the Board of Trustees of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, on the 7th day of February, A. D., 1922, by a vote of more than two-thirds of the members of said Board, to-wit: By the four-fifths vote of the members of said Board, did duly and regularly adopt a resolution determining that the public and necessity demanded, and demands, the acquisition of certain municipal improvements hereinafter described, the cost of which, to-wit: the sum of $14,000.00, or thereabouts, for acquiring, constructing, furnishing and equipping a city hall in and for said city, and the sum of $6000.00 or thereabouts for acquiring and constructing certain fire-fighting apparatus and a fire alarm system for said city, and each of said sums, would be too great for payment out of the ordinary annual income and revenue of said municipality, to-wit: the sum of $7000.00 or thereabouts.

Section 6. The Board of Trustees of said City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, does hereby submit to the qualified voters of said city at said special election, so consolidated, the said propositions for the issuance of said bonds, which propositions are hereinbefore set out, and hereby refers to said propositions in the summary of the same and the form hereinbefore prescribed for the ballots to be used at said election.

Section 7. Section 8. That the total indebtedness authorized to be created at such election shall be represented by bonds payable in the manner aforesaid, and that such bonds shall be issued in such denominations as the said Board of Trustees shall authorize, and as provided by law, and that such bonds shall be known as "Municipal Improvement Bonds, Issue of 1922".

Compiled by the Office Boy.

They All Go to Hal!

The cat's out of the bag. Hal is discovered. The cleverness of the following limericks, provoked by last week's "jingle" in the Hopper, amply justifies their publication, and it is believed that the victim of their humor is sporting enough to grin with all who laugh with and at him. A box of candy awaits the writer of the first one. Another chance for "poetic" guesses will be on tap next week.

That picturesque, Pilgrimage Cove,
Called in common parlance "the Grove,"
Had a fellow named Hal,
(Wish't I was his pal!)
How, in spite of his "ha'ol ha'ol" he throve!
Said he, "Mongst those rubicund kyx
Out there in the Carmelite Styx—
Gee, I'll make a hit!"
And, in fact, he was IT—
With "Aladdin" and "Scare 'em" and
"Chyx."
—(Don't Give Me Away)

Your Lochin'bar
Dear Mr. Sty
Permit me
To identify.

There's a certain young guy named B—gg,
Who dances a "wicked r—gg"
His shimmy-and-shake
Is perfectly jake—
All he needs is a willing M—gg.
—(D. Muir.)

I'm not Bragg-ing, but I could disclaux
The one who is beau of the beaux;
And reflection, I fear,
Is on each little dear
Who "wrythams" from head to her teaux,
A shakedown I'd like with your frame,
He asks—and she giggles his name;
Or "your hip is as mean
As your—crepe de chine;"
She's shocked—but looks pleased just the same.
—(M. Odesty.)

Go to it, old bandit!
'Long's the girls will stand it,
For you've nothing to lose
'Till a bottle of booze
Is broke on your snooze
By one of the girls' can'dates.
A calliope shrieks and yells
Like so many breaking-loose Hells!
The same a certain laddie
Whose rep's a trifle baddie,
As he toddles, and waddles,
And wiggles and boddles,
Gettin' wicked on dancin'-dells.

Carmel Muse an Early Riser
Motra's a precocious young Miss
To whom writing's the acme of bliss;
When at five years, or thereat,
She had mice in her garret,
Which she promptly got rid of like this:
There was a little mouse,
Who lived in a little house
Where lots of cheese was stored;
And in this little house
He got his room and board.
He had a little wife
Who cut her cheese with a knife;
She had had whiskers all her life.
When the children all were born,
The neighbors looked at them with a yorn,
Because they all had whiskers,
And they couldn't tell
The brothers from the sisters.

Shimmy Gems

I'm the little Robin,
And I keep my head a bobbin';
I'm the bird that gets the early worm,
I ate up all his brothers;
And half a dozen others,
And golly, how they tickle when they squirm.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

There was once on a time a young man who was always getting names mixed up. He met a couple of young ladies who were sisters. Their name was "Skipwith". He later referred to them as the Misses "Jump together". I wonder if this is the young man who calls Scabiosa, "Eczema".

PINE CONE COVERS THE FIELD.
The combined circulation of the Pine Cone and the Saturday Evening Post is more than two million and a quarter a week. There is no substitute for circulation.

Don't feel hurt if you don't get yours. You may be next. This is an open hopper. Send in your grist.

AN OVERSIZED SON.

Not long ago, Tom Cator and David Alberto went down in Tom's machine to the end of town to get a certain lady for a rehearsal. The young woman was a stranger here and had never met Alberto. As she approached the machine, she heard a rustling, and she looked toward the back seat, expecting to see Tom's little boy, Teddy, of whom she had heard, but had not seen. When she saw the large head, bushy hair and white face of Alberto gleaming in the moonlight, she was almost scared to death—if she'd had false teeth, they'd have rattled. She said that it was really confusing at the time and hard to realize all of a sudden that those features didn't belong with Tom's young son.

FROM THE OFFICE CUB.

There was a young man from the city,
Who thought what he saw was a kitty,
He gave it a pat,
And soon after that
He buried his clothes—what a pity!

SWELLING THE CENSUS.

Here's to the stork, a most valuable bird,
That inhabits the residence districts,
It does not sing tunes, nor yield any plumes,
But helps out the vital statistics.

MODESTY FORBIDS US TO POINT THE MORAL.

At the preliminary hearing in the last murder case in Monterey, a witness was called who was in the room at the moment that the crime was committed.

"What do you know of the killing?" the Judge inquired.

"Nothing your Honor," responded the witness.

The Judge looked unbelieving. "What were you doing that you could sit in a room where a man was being brutally murdered, and yet know nothing about it?"

"Your Honor," the witness replied meekly, "My attention was so distracted that I knew nothing that was going on around me. I was reading the Carmel Pine Cone."

A LITTLE SCHLOSSER—ITUS.

Unlike the menin-juy-tus, I've got the Carmel-eye-tus;
To keep us out of Carmel, you've simply gotta-fight-us.

THE LID WAS ON.

One of our local artists tells the following story: "One Saturday afternoon a lady came to our studio. She looked around with relief, then sank exhausted into a chair. 'Thank Goodness', said she, 'that I can find something open. This thing is getting on my nerves. My husband is raging up and down Ocean Avenue like a wild man. The Barber has a notice on his door to the effect that he has gone away for three weeks. I wanted to get some pins and the drygoods store was closed; it was the wrong hour for the Post Office delivery, and the drug-gist has on his door, 'I have gone on my vacation but the plumber will be here at 7 o'clock each evening to open up' so we're going home tomorrow.'"

IFS, BUTS AND DOOS

There's one thing we'll agree on, You'll admit when you scan this verse; As a poet I'm a darn good engineer. It couldn't be much worse. If I did not like Carmel And her atmosphere and all, If I did not like her people, And couldn't hear her call, If I did not love her sea coast, Her sand dunes white and gray, If I could not picture progress, In her real quaint Carmel way, If all these things were true, Which I'm glad to say they're not—I'd really have no good excuse, To tell you of this thought. Build a City Hall and Firehouse, With Chemical and Hose, Plan it now and build it, Before a summer sees its close. Become an economic government, And a fire-protected town, It can't hurt real Carmel beauty, Or keep a good place down.

Among last week's arrivals here from Los Angeles was Mrs. Georgiana Humboldt. She will be joined by members of her family this week, and remain in Carmel about two months.

Gordon Campbell, one of Sunset School's best athletes, is out of commission for a while with a case of blood-poison in his hand. Prompt medical attention averted a serious case.

The advertisement of the Carmel Sanitary Board appears in another column in this issue. It is in connection with the work of laying laterals to connect with the Ocean avenue sewer.

Well Known Comedy Star Visits Brother in Carmel

Wilma W. Hervey, sister of Thomas Vincent Cator, arrived unexpectedly in Carmel last Sunday morning. Miss Hervey is with the moving pictures in the Paul Gerson studios in San Francisco. She has been playing comedy roles in the movies for the past three years. Those who have seen the Toonerville Trolley Comedies will remember Miss Hervey in the character of Katrinka. She has also played with Sidney Drew, and is now engaged in doing comedy parts in a series of twelve rural two reels. Miss Hervey had contracted to be out on location on Monday morning, so her visit with Mr. Cator had to be cut short, notwithstanding the fact that they have not met for a number of years.
